Studio and Charitable Work

My studio is within London's Collage Arts creative regeneration charity. I am on the steering committee for the annual 'N22 Open Studios' showcasing over 100 artists and their impact and value to North London's diverse communities. I have also participated in numerous charitable art-based fund raising initiatives: representative efforts include 'Spotlight on Asylum' assisting vulnerable women asylum seekers, the CRIS Cancer Foundation funding vital clinical medical research in the UK and Europe and several initiatives to benefit NHS staff during the ongoing pandemic.

Other Experience

I lived exclusively in Italy for 10 years (2007-2017). During that time I worked on my practice and went on to participate in several solo and group shows in that country. In 2017 I moved to live and work in North London: this dichotomy, layered upon my education in the United States, directly impacts how I view the world and influences my ongoing work.
